Unintended Spiritual Motivation from the Corporate World

Perhaps a few of you read the article I wrote for the Calvary Connect several weeks ago about effective corporate slogans. I got to thinking about how these famous slogans can relate to our spiritual lives. I hesitated to write another piece and thought, “Just do it” (Nike). I remembered the many sermons and Sunday School lessons that seemed to fade away even though God’s love was in each one. Every once in a while, our patient Lord got through to me and reminded me that like Delta “God is ready when you are,” (Delta Airlines). When you are tuned in to receive God’s word because, “It’s the real thing” (Coke) you realize that all along He’s been saying, “Can you hear me now?” (Verizon).

God has always wanted the best for us, “Because we’re worth it” (L’Oreal) so He sent Jesus, “The best a man can get” (Gillette) and we should “Accept no substitutes” (Nike again) for our lives’ guiding light. “When you care enough to send the very best” (Hallmark) as our Lord did with Jesus then the ever-present evils and temptations that tell us “We are the competition” (Ferrari) are easier to resist.

When we accept that God’s love “Is free and always will be” (Facebook) we can get on with our spiritual journey in the “Relentless pursuit of perfection” (Porsche) trying to be more Christlike. Of course, you can always “Have it your way” (Burger King) being satisfied with a less-than-ideal spiritual life. But remember “Good enough never is” (Mrs. Fields cookies).
